Synopsis

General

The Viewer, a cybernetically enhanced human from the mega-city space ship known as 'Titan' is granted a contract that will severely impact the lives of everyone on board the ship, the weight of the contract means that every choice made matters.

A Universal Introduction

The Viewer, unexpectedly called upon by an old friend is introduced to a optimistic rookie Netrunner who goes by the name ". They are told that they have been called upon by some Fortuna (more like corporate goon) for a contract. How will the new duo get along?

The Contract

The Contract; brought to light by some Fortuna is going to is to hunt the illusive 'Ros' a Neuromancer that has been shaking things up with the big-wigs. They want her incapacitated. Not only in body but in mind. As her occupation suggests, this will be a difficult task.

Catch-22

The duo hit a wall when they are confronted by Ros herself, who uploads information into their Mindchips. This gives them a new perspective on the contract as they uncover the many sides of the truth and what they've actually been tasked to do

Error 404

All the information the duo have collected has not so mysteriously been erased from their minds. The duo must start from scratch but use their intuition to recover as much of the info as they can.

Station Terra

They've finally found enough information to pinpoint Ros to Station Terra, a semi-abandoned sub-station on the desolate planet earth. Ros is surprised by their tenacity and rushes to show them her truth of their contract and how out of depth the pair are.

Moving upwards...or downwards?

The pair must choose whether or not to dispatch Ros, whilst coming to an agreement they hold her in captivity until they reach the Titan. As they near the ship they must make the crucial decision, before they report back to the Fortuna.

Penultimate

They've made their decision, now they must deal with the fallout.
